In the late summer of that year we lived in a house in a village that looked across the river and the plain to the mountains. In the bed of the river there were pebbles and boulders, dry and white in the sun, and the water was clear and swiftly moving and blue in the channels. Troops went by the house and down the road and the dust they raised powdered the leaves of the tree. The trunks of the trees too were dusty and the leaves fell early that year and we saw the troops marching along the road and the dust rising and leaves stirred by the breeze, falling and the soldiers marching and afterward, the road bare and white except for the leaves.

The plain was rich with crops; there were many orchards of fruit trees and beyond the plain the mountains were brown and bare. There was fighting in the mountains and at night we could see flashes from the artillery. In the dark it was like summer lightning, but the nights were cool and there was not the feeling of a storm coming.

(i) Comment on the contrast between plains and the mountains.
(ii) What is the writer’s attitude to Nature?
(iii) Comment on the man/nature contrast.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds.
Admit impediments. Love is not love.
Which alters when it alteration finds
Or bends with the remover to remove.
O no. It is an ever fixed mark.
That looks on tempests, and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks.
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks
But bears it out even to the edge of the doom.
If this be error and upon me proved
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.
